

Sometimes things happen in life that make it hard to pay your bills. Call your energy provider and talk to them about your situation.

You can also ask a support person to contact your energy provider for you.

Your energy provider may be able to assist you with:

- different options to pay your bills
- the best energy plan for you
- tips on how to manage your energy use
- information on government concessions, relief schemes, energy rebates and financial counselling services.

Call your energy provider as soon as you know you may have trouble paying your energy bill.

If you are in a hardship program and meeting its conditions, your energy provider cannot disconnect you.

This information applies to residential energy consumers in New South Wales, South Australia, Tasmania, Queensland and the Australian Capital Territory.

Know your rights

Under the law, your energy provider must have a hardship policy that tells you how they can assist you if you are having trouble paying your energy bills due to hardship.

You can find it on their website or ask them to send you a copy.

What you need to do

Talk to the energy provider that sends your electricity or gas bills.

Tell them you're having a tough time and you need help paying your bills.

Make sure you tell your energy provider how much you can pay and when you can pay it.

If you're not happy with how your energy provider has helped you, call the energy ombudsman in your state or territory.
